Quotes by Adams, Richard

from QuotationsBook.com

Richard Adams (ca. 1626 - 7 February 1698), a non-conforming English Presbyterian divine, author of various sermons and other writings in divinity, was the grandson of Richard Adams, the rector of Woodchurch, in the part of Cheshire which is called the hundred of Wirral, and son of Charles Adams, who, with his brother Randal, was brought up to the church, and became the father of four Adams - Richard, Peter, Thomas, and Charles, who were all clergymen.

My heart has joined the thousand, for my friend stopped running today.

- Adams, Richard
